Atherton is known for the wealth of its residents. In 1990 and 2019 Atherton was ranked as having the highest per capita income in the United States in cities with populations between 2,500 and 9,999. The area covered by its zip code is regularly ranked as having the highest cost of living in the U.S. During the 1860s Atherton was recognized as Fair Oaks. In 1923 the named was changed to honor of 19th Century landowner Faxon Dean Atherton. The Town of Atherton has a reputation for being a strong supporter of local control and "home rule." The city has been in litigation several times over the years regarding state mandates and regional issues. Atherton's stated land use goal is to "...preserve the Town's character as a scenic, rural, thickly wooded residential area with abundant open space." Town of Atherton incorporated in September 1923. The town's 2020 population is 7,193. George Rodericks is the Atherton City Manager and Anthony W. Suber is the Deputy City Manager and City Clerk. Robert Barron III is the Finance Director, Sung Kwon is the Town Planner, and Robert Ovadia is the Public Works Director and City Engineer. With most of the land dedicated to cemeteries, Colma is a town that was founded as a necropolis in 1924. The population of the dead in town is speculated to be somewhere near 1.5 million. Before 1872, Colma was called "Station" or "School House Station," the name of the first post office in 1869. Colma became the cemetery town after San Francisco outlawed new interments within its city limits in 1900 and then evicted all existing cemeteries in 1912. The town was first incorporated as the Town of Lawndale in 1924. As Lawndale already existed in Los Angeles County, the post office continued using Colma. The town name was officially changed back to Colma in 1941. Many notable people have been buried in Colma, among the leaders and politicians are many from other walks of life like Wyatt Earp, Joe DiMaggio, and Willie McCovey. Brian Dossey has been the Colma City Manager and Caitlin Corley is City Clerk. Angelika Abellana is the Recreation Manager, and John Munsey is Chief of Police.
