A Random Listing of California City Managers, Summer, 2010

Summer 2010 is well underway. If it was a ship, it has left the dock, and if it was a train, it has left the station. Vacations are being taken, and well-earned needed relaxation is fully engaged. Oakland, San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles and Anaheim have major league baseball teams exciting fans in season play.

This is a wonderful time of year for many. This is the time of year for trips to the Hawaiian Islands and European tours, and Caribbean cruises. It is a time to re-charge those batteries and get ready to continue working hard to operate well-oiled organizations to provide needed public services. We salute the public managers of California.

A Random Listing of California City Managers, Summer, 2010

So, we are taking a "random" approach to this July, 2010 issue of the City Manager Newsletter by Trackdown. There are those who have been listed multiple times under different categories, and those who have not been listed at all. Here we are trying to acknowledge California city managers from various parts of our great...though broke...State of California. (The State must be broke. Otherwise the Governor and Legislature would not be taking revenue from local governments).

Our mission is always to try to acknowledge as many folks as we can. We try to mention names so that old friends and acquaintances might be brought up to date. We can always use help so please pass along information that we might use either in the body of a newsletter or in the "Picking Up the Pieces" feature.

Please remember that this is a random group of folks we have brought together by working our way through the cities of California beginning with Adelanto and meandering.

Adelanto comes first in the alphabetical listings of California's cities. D. James Hart has been the Adelanto City Manager since January, 2005. Prior to his Adelanto assignment, Jim served as City Manager in Twentynine Palms and Rancho Santa Margarita. He also worked in the city organizations in Chino and Rancho Cucamonga. Jim has taught at Chaffey Community College in Rancho Cucamonga, and at Copper Mountain College in Joshua Tree. Jim earned a Ph.D. in Business Administration from California Coast University, and he has an MPA from Brigham Young University. Speaking to the subject of contracting law enforcement with the Sheriff's Department, Jim has been attributed with saying that in his current municipal service situation, it is his view that having one large agency oversee police services is cheaper and more efficient, plus the city avoids the headaches of labor negotiations.

On Saturday, March 6, New Remote Productions MTV reality show "The Dudesons" unveiled an inappropriate ice sculpture in front of the historic Truckee Railroad Station. The unveiling became a lesson in why cities and towns should not trust movie, television and other media production companies. Though assuring town officials the sculpture would be in good taste, it turned out to be a "...giant penis with water shooting out," as described by one of the nearby business people. She said that it was totally inappropriate, and parents were hurrying their children away from the site. The production company had lied to town officials. The town exercised due diligence, but was a victim of an unscrupulous production company.

Tony Lashbrook is the Truckee Town Manager and Executive Director of the Redevelopment Agency. Tony joined the Truckee staff in 1994 as the Community Development Director.
